NATURE'S BARRIERS

Mountains . . . Lakes . . . Winter Ice and Snow

Flying straight-as-an-arrow to your destination, Pennsylvania-Central airliners on the Milwaukee-Detroit-Washington route hurdle giant natural barriers which hamper and impede travel on the ground.

While surface transportation creeps through the Allegheny Mountains and crawls around Lake Erie and Lake Michigan, sleek PCA transports streak through the sky above, arriving hours earlier.

When King Winter spreads his white mantle over the hills and valleys—when ice coats the highways, and drifts of heavy snow hinder surface travel—take to the air—where the "track is fast" through all seasons.

Nature's barriers, when seen from the sky, become only spots of scenic beauty. Plan now to enjoy swift miles of cozy arm chair comfort and interesting travel on your next trip.

Save more than 5 hours between Pittsburgh and Washington, a mere matter of 70 minutes by air. Flying time from Detroit to Pittsburgh is less than 2 hours, a saving of more than 5 hours over fastest ground travel.

PCA transports hurdle Lake Michigan in a brief 40 minute flight, saving 6 hours over surface travel to Detroit.

Take advantage of the time and money-saving service of Pennsylvania-Central Airlines. Saves energy, too. Try it—you'll be surprised how much fresher you feel at the journey's end.
