A TRIBUTE BY

Major Al Williams

An excerpt from a talk given on April 2, over Radio Station KDKA, Pittsburgh, Pa., by Major Al Williams, Manager of Aviation Department, Gulf Oil Corporation.

"The Central Airlines hold the airmail contract of this city . . . and as the news of the impending flood spread through the country . . . they found their airmail shipments mounting to and beyond emergency loads.

With surface transportation at a standstill . . . friends and relatives of people in Pittsburgh demanded news of their dear ones . . . American business had to go on . . . and all hands turned with one accord and poured tons of mail into the Central Airlines' ships . . . Every passenger seat accommodation was spoken for by three or four people.

One ship after another was pressed into service . . . and flew in and out of this city loaded to the safety limit . . . and in addition to the emergency airmail and full passenger accommodation . . . Central Airlines managed to carry about 15,000 pounds of relief express into this city in four days . . . How they managed to do it I don't know . . . I visited their Operation Headquarters . . . and strange as it may seem . . . that was one place that was tranquil and quiet.

The Ground crews . . . and Operation Force . . . and Radio Personnel . . . and the Pilots were too busy to be excited . . . while the rest of us were wondering what we could do to keep busy and help . . . These people knew their job . . . recognized the size of the task . . . and worked their way thru it efficiently—and best of all with a smile."

As economical as it is fast
. . . Flying by Central Airlines

★ Interior of new Central Airliners showing the spacious arrangement of the seats which are deeply upholstered and adjustable for complete relaxation. The sound-proof cabin is either air cooled or heated, as the outside temperature requires, for a clean, comfortable journey.

NEW COMFORT

The new sound-proof Central Airliners bring not only speed but a new standard of comfort to the route over which they fly.

Comfort depends primarily on smooth riding qualities which, on Central Airliners, is obtained through specially developed engine synchronizers that remove harmonic propeller vibrations and consequently cabin motion and noise.

The cabin is built high enough over the wings to afford all passengers a clear and unobstructed view of the terrain over which they are flying.
